

Nature: enjoy and protect

People in this province enjoy “getting away from it all” by heading into the woods.

But the natural beauty of Newfoundland and Labrador is at risk – we have to work together to protect it.

What can you do?

- Follow the guidelines in this brochure.
- Request that the government enforce current protected areas regulations so irresponsible ATV use is reduced.

Be a good example!

Currently there are over 40,000 ATVs operating in this province, and most of them are being used on the island portion.

If even 1% of these ATVs are being used carelessly, that means over 400 people are driving across wetlands and beaches, destroying habitats, and disturbing wildlife, and giving ATV riders a bad name.

The reality is that more than 1% of riders drive their ATVs irresponsibly, and the damage they cause is often impossible to repair.

Stay on existing trails!

A natural legacy

If we want our children to have the privilege to ‘get away from it all’ we need to take action.

Protect Wetlands:

Irresponsible ATV use on wetlands leaves deep ruts that alter water flow, interrupt the ecosystem and threaten plant and animal life.

Protect Beaches:

Indiscriminate ATV use on beaches ruins nesting grounds and destroys dunes, threatening rare species and causing permanent damage.

Be A Skilled Driver:

Learn the best way to travel on steep grades, slick terrain, and over rocky areas, so you can keep yourself safe and your impact on the environment to a minimum.

Get Involved:

Protect the land you ride on: report irresponsible use of ATVs, support stronger enforcement in protected areas, and train new riders to ride responsibly.
